WASHINGTON LETTER.

(From our regular Correspondent.)

WASHINGTON, D. C. Aug. 18, 1890.

The President just now occupies a position that cannot fail to seriously tax the good sense which he has time after time shown himself to be largely endowed with. It is to him that the rank and file of the republican party look for a settlement of the unfortunate difference of opinion that has risen among the republican Senators. Senator Quay seems determined to get his resolution confining the legislation of the present session to the tariff bill; the appropriation bills and bills affecting public buildings and grounds before the Senate. His resolution when first offered last week was referred to the committee on Rules, as well as an amendment offered by Senator Hoar to include the Federal Election bill in the legislation of the session. A caucus has since been held; but nothing was done except to discuss the situation and by a vote of 18 to 17 to refuse to endorse Senator Hoar's amendment.

Saturday afternoon Senator Quay, without waiting for the committee on Rules to report, asked unanimous consent to offer the same resolution, which also provides for taking a final vote on the tariff bill on Aug. 30, but Senator Edmunds objected, the matter went over and Mr. Quay gave notice that he would this week offer the same resolution and insist upon its consideration. It is expected that all of the Southern Senators will support Mr. Quay's resolution, in fact it is charged that it is the result of a bargain with—this I do not believe—because it will prevent action upon the Federal Election bill.

Meanwhile Senator Hoar who is leading those who favor the passing of both tariff and Federal Election bills is by no means idle. Telegrams to absent republican Senators have been sent urging them to return at once, and it is not impossible that another caucus will be held before the matter is finally settled, and if a full attendance can be secured it is probable that Mr. Quay's resolution may be defeated, but if he can get it voted upon by the Senate before the caucus meets, and the democrats support him it will be adopted.

The Louisiana Lottery lobby is solidly in favor of the Quay resolution because it will prevent the passage by the Senate of the rigorous anti-lottery bill which the House on Saturday took up and passed and numerous other lobbyists representing interests that will be more or less damaged by legislation which has already passed the House are adding their influence towards getting the Quay resolution adopted by the Senate.

Speaker Reed, while deeply regretting the turn which things have taken in the Senate, will do nothing to prolong the session in order to force the Senate to act on the Federal Election bill. He says the House has done its duty and if the Senate refuses to do likewise let its members answer for it to their constituents.

The President has so far taken no side in the dispute though it is pretty now is that the attendance this week will be larger and the delays fewer.

It is good news to active republicans to know that Assistant Postmaster General Clarkson, whose right to be called a political hustler has been fully proven, is, after September 1, when he resigns his present office, to take an active part in the management of the Republican Congressional Campaign Committee. That Committee has elected Representative Carter, of Montana Secretary Edward C. O'Brien, of New York at present disbursing clerk of the House, Treasurer. The committee proposes to make a winning fight.

Secretary Windom has issued orders that the prices paid for silver, under the new law, shall be made public on the days of purchase. This spoiled a lot of democratic thunder.

Senator Plumb has offered an amendment to the tin plate schedule of the tariff bill, which is now being debated, to allow the duty on tin plate to remain as at present and to give a bounty of 1 cent a pound on tin plate manufactured in the United States.

The United States Senate is in a titter, and has several times laughed "right out loud," at the expense of its most frigidly dignified member. Several days ago during one of the numerous roll calls for a quorum Senator Edmunds made his appearance at one of the cloak doors and answered to his name in a condition which has not been equaled for grotesqueness since Ben Le Fevre some years ago, rushed from the bath room to the floor of the House of Representatives to cast his vote, clothed entirely with Turkish towels. The barber had cut about half of Mr. Edmunds hair when his name was called; he jumped out of the chair, strode to the door and answered, his neck being all the while encircled by a white cloth which reached below his knees like a gown, and the hair on one side of his head cut very close and on the other side unusually long—there is none on top anyway. The effect can better be imagined than written.

If ten habitues of the Capitol were asked to name the ablest and most dignified member of the Senate eight of them would select, George F Edmunds, and rightly too. The "F" in his name according to facetious newspaper men, is for "Frigid." As a Constitutional lawyer and an authority on parliamentary law Mr. Edmunds has few peers, and no superiors. His pet antipathy is a newspaper man in his professional capacity; but if he knows that you will not print what you hear he will entertain you as few men can whether it be in the parlor of his prison-like, that is in external appearance, residence in this city, or in his committee-room.

Some of the boys played a cruel joke on a fresh young man sent here last winter by a prominent Western paper. He was told that all he had to do was to introduce himself to Senator Edmunds and ask for any information he might wish to send his paper about the business transacted in executive session; the fact was impressed upon his mind that Mr. Edmunds was the man who furnished the press with this news. The afternoon of the day the first executive session was held, this young man tackled the Senator as he was leaving the building,

Sir! roared the Senator, giving him a look which came near permanently paralyzing him.

It was two days before the youngster was seen at the Capitol, and then he could not be coaxed to go on the Senate side of the building.

Senator Farwell has been quite unwell for some time and yesterday his condition was considered some what dangerous. Mrs. Farwell, who was in Chicago, was telegraphed for, and she is expected here to-morrow.

I have made a discovery! It may no be as important as some of those made by Stanley in Africa, but you can judge for yourself. Last night I attended an entertainment at a friends residence. It was not long before my ears were greeted with a faint, far-away tinkle tinkle not unlike the merry music of silver sleigh bells a long ways off. I could not for the life of me tell what they were. Finally I located the sound as coming from a merry group of young people but the most careful scrutiny, made of course, on the sly, failed to show which one the jingle came from Becoming desperate I asked one of well known that he favors the Federal bill, and its friends are trying to get him to do something to help them, while its opponents are equally as persistent in asking him to keep his hands off. Mr. Quay and nearly every republican who is expected to vote for his resolution say that they favor the Election bill, but believe it to be impossible to pass both it and the tariff bill at this session, and they regard the tariff bill as the most important.

The Senate devoted Friday and Saturday to a discussion of the River and Harbor bill which was passed. It contained many important amendments.

The house had a time all last week on account of the absence of a quorum about half the time. The prospect the young ladies in the aforesaid group if she heard the tinkle of the bells. She blushed deeply and in some confusion requested me to get her an ice.

Later I went to my hostess wife and asked her for information about the tinkling bells, which I was beginning to think were the creation of a disordered brain.

"If you can keep a secret remain here a few minutes," she said as she left the room.

"Is this like what you heard," she said as she returned with one hand held behind.

"Yes," what is it, I answered eagerly?

"Hush, hush, not so loud, it is Julia's garter," and handing me a dainty circle of yellow satin with an oxydized silver clasp along the bottom of which were six of the tiniest, cutest little silver bells imaginable she sat down and laughed at my discomfiture. She then condescended to inform me that it was the very latest fad sent over from the house of fads——Paris.

The silk sashes so generally worn by men this summer appear harmless enough to look at, but they have gotten one United States Senator into trouble, and it is not certain by any means that it will not end in his losing his seat. The unfortunate man is Senator Vance of North Carolina, who in search of comfort during the recent torrid weather donned a flannel shirt and in place of a vest, a silk sash. All would have been well if one of his farmer constituents had not visited Washington and seen him. This visit originated the present fight which the Farmer's Alliance is making on Vance.

The Clergy in Politics.

Awhile ago Bishop Potter, who seems to have time to spare from his church duties to dabble considerably in practical politics, started an independent movement for the next municipal election in New York. A considerable number of clergymen of prominence joined him, and the movement has attained some headway. How much it promises as to results it is hard to say. The clergy in politics is a thing so new that results may be different from what the prospect seems to indicate. Clergymen are not always good politicians—indeed, they seldom are. They have been known to do what the patient cow sometimes does, kick over the milk just at the end. They did it famously for Mr. Blaine in 1884, and with five words elected Mr. Cleveland. Therefore one realizes a feeling of danger whenever ministers go into politics. Ministers would very likely have the same feeling for religion were politicians to take possession of the pulpit. Although some able discussions were presented and considerable applause created, it might not be a state of prosperity for true religion and vital purity. There is something in practical politics for which the pulpit does not frequently prepare one. An acquaintance with the worldly things is essential, which does not imply wicked ways. Without any doubt St. Paul was a great politician in the politics of his time, and he beat his enemies signally many a time. A broad guage man to begin with, in practice he was a leader in many things as well as a great teacher of theology. Bishop Potter is not a St. Paul by any means. His estimate of men now and one hundred years ago proves that. There are bad men in politics without doubt, and unfortunately the same is true of the ranks of the clergy. It would be good advice to Bishop Potter and his associates, to do what they can to have politics pure, but as running conventions making nominations and conducting elections don't try it!

THE COUNTY TICKET.

The ticket put in nomination on Tuesday, although not evenly distributed geographically, is undoubtedly a strong and winning ticket, and when the polls close next November we feel confident that the most ballots will be counted in favor of the Republican nominees, showing that the people of Centre county sanctioned the work done on Tuesday;

MATTERN AND FRYEBERGER,

for the Legislature heads the ticket with two of the strongest men that can be put up in Centre county, regardless of party. We do not suppose there is a more popular man in the county than just Guyer Mattern. A laboring man, he understands the needs and interests of his fellowmen and has always advocated their rights. Mr. Fryeberger is a gentleman known all over Centre county and his nomination is a prophecy of victory.

JHON A WOLFE,

Everybody has heard of or knows the gallant Major John A. Wolfe, of Philipsburg, the man who was on Tuesday nominated for Sheriff. As a soldier, his record great; as a Republican he can stand unchallenged, and as a citizen and neighbor he enjoys a reputation second to none in the county. He is enterprising and aggressive in politics and should he be elected would make a noble officer.

EDWIN TYSON,

another Philipsburg man, is so generally known all over Centre county that anything we might say could not possibly enhance his present good reputation. A successful business man, a good republican and a gentleman in the highest sense of the word, he would make an efficient county officer.

JOHN F. HARTER,

Stands on his past three year's record. He has made an able, efficient and consistent officer, and his election this fall is already assured.

GEORGE W. FISHER,

of Half Moon township, the candidate for register, is perhaps less known all over the county than any of the other men on the ticket. But notwithstanding that fact, he is a man deserving of the entire confidence and support of the party he represents.

STROHM AND KUNES

For County Commissioners, makes up a good strong ticket. Mr. Strohm has had experience in the commissioner's office, he being clerk to the present board for some time past, and has proven himself to be fully capable of managing the affairs of the county's finances. D B Kunes is well known all over the county as a most aggressive and fearless republican and will make a good fight.

FOR COUNTY AUDITORS

W B Krape and Samuel T Gray complete the ticket. Both these men are so well known that we need not eulogize them.

JOHN M. DALE,

As County Chairman, will prove to the party that in young blood there is war and if the entire republican ticket is not elected this fall it will not be because he does not put forth the energy. All in all the party has now a winning ticket in the field.

SHALL THE MINORITY RULE?

The Democratic Senators who sat in the Senate Chamber during the civil war, though rather few in number, were not lacking in the gift of speech. Hendricks, of Indiana; Reverdy Johnson, of Maryland; Garrett Davis, of Kentucky, and a half a dozen others, could talk by the hour or day without conscious effort. But if any or all of those gentlemen had proposed to talk against time for the purpose of defeating necessary war legislation, how long would the vigorous Republicanism that then held sway in the Senate have stood that sort of nonsense?

We have to-day, however, the extraordinary spectacle of a Republican majority of twelve in the Senate considering whether, in order to secure the consent of the minority to an important Republican measure, it will agree to sacrifice another measure of equal concern to the party and to the country. Why should the majority purchase the privilege of passing a tariff bill? The Senate of Sumner, of Zack Chandler, and of Ben Wade did not secure the right of legislation by pursuing any such policy.

The courtesy of the Senate has become the manacles of majority. The latter may propose legislation but cannot dispose of it save only with the consent of the minority. The majority can assent and maintain their rights if they choose, or they basely surrender them to their loquacious and long-winded opponents, as proposed in the Quay resolution.

A Fearless Manly Denial.

When it suited the purpose of Senator Delamater, and not a moment earlier, he came forward as an honest, fearless man to deny the charges made by ex-Senator Emery, just before the decision of the late McKean county primaries, and his accompanying explanation—submitted in all candor to an audience in the Court House at Chambersburg—must gain for him the respect and esteem of good citizens every where. If no other fact had been established by this open and fair proceeding the assertion can no longer be made that Senator Delamater slips and hurries along to avoid public gaze. The truth is that he seeks the broadest light upon his past record and is ready to lead inquiries by disarming in advance the shafts of his enemies.

The denial is not a defense, for Senator Delamater has been upon the aggressive from the start, and will be found there until the close. It is rather a vigorous and cutting arrangement of the few whose object has been to further a personal cause more than the great Republican party from whose ranks they have chosen to drop. When Senator Delamater met Judge John Stewart, the leader of the Independents of 1882, the last act resulting from the exodus of that year closed, and remained but to seal the hearty good will and support so placed in evidence. This was was accomplished at the grand public reception of Thursday evening, and it was all more eminently fitting that that the disentient Emery should be answered just when he was in that strong emphasis that speaks for the truth.

The rebuke is manly, dignified and emphatic. Not a word in equivocation. Not a shadow of a doubt. It was not enough that friends should take up his cause and express the utmost confidence in the citizens called to lead in the contest for governor. An active professional and business career brought with it golden laurels of endorsement from those among whom character and reputation had been built as an enduring edifice, but there was something beyond. Silence had served its usefulness and time seemed to add but keener edges to charges that grew in burden. And Senator Delamater meets the issue with the courage of a lion at the proper moment. How does he meet it?

"As the candidate of that party I cannot allow its interests to be prejudiced in the estimation of any citizen by a refusal to answer any inquiry touching my personal integrity, and I take this occasion to enter my most positive, emphatic and unequivocal denial of each and every charge preferred by Senator Emery. So that I may be fully understood, and that the real questions of the hour may not be obscured by personalities growing out of these attacks, and future reference to this subject may be avoided, I enter this denial to all charges, by whomsoever preferred, which assail my honor as a man and my integrity as a citizen."

There is no mistaking the man nor the motive. Denial comes clean cut, square to the point and not a word beyond. It is in effect a challenge that Mr. Emery will be slow to consider, even if he dares to accept. The able, the honest leader is there to battle for protection and intends that there shall be no side issue to interfere.—Williamsport G. & B.

A Shocking Death.

George Bressler Calderwood, of Mill Hall, met with a terrible accident at the Armstrong paper mill, in this city, last evening about 8 o'clock, which resulted in his death at the mill this morning between the hours of 3 and 4 o'clock. The brief particulars of the sad affair are that he was endeavoring to put a belt on a pulley when through a slip of the foot or in some such way he was caught by the belt and whirled round and round the pulley with terrific force, breaking a number of ribs each of which it is said were doubly fractured, and being otherwise severely injured. He was being assisted at the time by one Thomas Hustleton, who was horrified at the accident to his companion.

The remains of the unfortunate man were sent to Mill Hall this morning on the early Bald Eagle train, where he has a wife and three children. His age was 46 years, 3 months and 9 days. Mr. Calderwood was a soldier during the war of the rebellion, but we do not know to what regiment or company he belonged.—L H Democrat.

Our Story Teller

THE EXILES

A RUSSIAN STORY.

"Father, the iniquities of which you have been the victim, this odious censure and this exile which you did not deserve have troubled my mind. I have suffered greatly in seeing you suffer. I rose in insurrection against that blind and criminal society of which you had so much to complain; I wished to avenge you!"

"One obtains vengeance by rehabilitating himself in the eyes of those who believe him guilty, or who disbelieving his guilt affirm it," said Yermac, sternly. "Injustice must be made to bend. And now—"

"And now, what do you wish should become of me?" interrupted Dimitri. "I cannot return among honest people—that is certain. Abandon me to my fate! I will live despised by all and myself!"

"No; you can die!"

"What!"

"I say that you can expiate your crimes, wipe out your shame and restore me the honor of my name—"

"How!"

"By death!"

"You wish me to die!" said Dimitri, with a sad smile. "I have thought of death many times, for life is a burden to me, and the hours when I feel ready to deliver myself from it are growing more and more frequent. Patience, father; soon, perhaps, you will hear no more of your son!"

"That is not what I wish. Justice demands a less voluntary and more immediate expiation having the value and force of punishment. An ignominious death is required, and you are going to receive it at my hands!"

"A father kill his son!"

"There is here neither father nor son! There is, on the other hand, far from every tribunal, a man whom the law has consecrated a judge, who has never laid aside that character despite his unwonted forfeiture, and who should pronounce your death sentence! That sentence I will execute. Follow me."

He dragged him behind some rocks which hid both of them from the sight of Dimitri's companions. The latter seemed to have divined a stormy explanation between the father and son, and held themselves in readiness to fly to the assistance of their comrade.

Dimitri, livid, regarded his father with that fixed glance which a criminal fastens on his executioner at the moment of execution, for the young man felt that he was about to receive his death at his father's hands.

"Father, your will be done!" murmured he.

"There are words which should not be profaned," said Yermac, in a stern voice. "Give me your belt!"

"For what purpose!"

"To tie you to a tree."

"It is useless; you shall see that I know how to die. When I am dead, you will have to push me to make me fall."

"Obey; this binding is a humiliation to which you should submit."

"If so, I consent to it. Do as you will."

Dimitri took off and handed him his long woollen belt. His father, pushing him against a larch, passed it around his body and tied it in a knot behind the tree; then he placed himself before his son. He drew from the leather belt, which kept them at his sides, his two revolvers and said, with emotion which he did not strive to hide:

"You are about to die, Dimitri—alas! in this place! Who could have told me so the day you were born!—Ah! if your mother—Dimitri, turn your thoughts to God! Pray, my child!"

"But, first, father, shall I have your pardon after I am dead!"

"Yes, when you have expiated—"

A cold sweat broke out on the chief of police's forehead. The judge was awakening in the father.

"Farewell, father; I die repentant!" murmured Dimitri.

And he closed his eyes.

Yermac drew back three paces. He held one of his pistols in each hand. He aimed them at Dimitri's breast, ready to fire. This horrible scene was illuminated by the bloody glare thrown from the destroyed forest.

Suddenly, Yermac staggered, sank down and lay stretched upon the ground; he seemed stricken with that death which he wished to give.

"Father!" cried Dimitri, with a sob of anguish.

The chief of police could not hear him. He lay deprived of sense, his face was distorted and his eyes protruding from their sockets.

"Father! it is I who should die, and not you!—father, return to life! Hear my voice."

Dimitri's companions, uneasy at his disappearance, ran up. While some released the young man from the tree, others bent over the stiffened body of his father.

Then, these more than strange-looking men, instead of remaining massed, scattered. As they marched straight towards the bush, they fired a shower of balls at the audacious man who had the courage to await their coming.

Soon Yermac was hemmed in on all sides and entirely at the discretion of his aggressors. The latter took position—they utilized everything—trees, rocks, and inequalities of the ground—and, slowly, giving themselves time to take steady aim, they made Yermac a target.

The chief of police did not lose his presence of mind and bravely sustained this disloyal attack. Three times he reloaded his

"Dimitri," said he, taking the young man by the arm, "you must be our chief. Your father has killed Koskintine."

"Why should Dimitri be our chief?" asked another of the men, a violent fellow, a brute with red hair and a hard and menacing look. "We shall see!" added he, without waiting for an answer.

"He must be our chief because it is in accordance with the custom of our band, Ivan! The oldest is the chief, and, when he fails to respond, the youngest. Dimitri is the youngest among us."

"I will restore your harmony," said Dimitri, at last. "My friends, I am about to forsake you. Leave me. If my father should recover consciousness—"

"If he should recover consciousness," said Ivan, "he would kill you. He is not the man to pardon you. But reassure yourself—he is really dead. Come with us."

"No; depart without me—leave me here," said Yermac's son. "And strive to quit your evil ways."

"What sort of a song are you singing now?" said Ivan. "Since you are our chief, follow us; you can think over matters later."

"Ivan is right!" cried the entire band in chorus.

Dimitri protested, but the gold-robbers laid violent hands on him and dragged him away with them.

A moment afterwards, they had vanished behind an elevation, and there remained, upon the spot where the terrible scene had taken place and in the vicinity of the conflagration, only the chief of police, whose body had been hastily covered with branches cut from the trees, and, twenty yards away, the corpse of the brigand Koskintine stripped to the waist.

In the distance, the forest had finished burning. Here and there, arose, from half-extinguished clumps, columns of smoke like broad watered ribbons. The day, slow to come and very short at this season, at length dawned, gradually blanching that which yet remained in the sky of the glare of the conflagration.

CHAPTER XI.—THE PRISONER.

At this moment, from behind an undulation of the soil, rose up an enormous animal, a bear with brown fur and black limbs, the shoulders of which were encircled by a white band resembling a collar.

The beast stopped and suddenly showed fearful energy, occasioned, doubtless, by the gnawings of its stomach. It went to the brigand, who lay stretched in death upon the snow tinged pink by the conflagration of the forest. It walked around the corpse, smelled it, and, taking a convenient position, calmly began to devour it.

When the creature had swallowed the flesh, which it tore to pieces with its sharp nails and crunched with its powerful jaws, it went, dripping with blood, towards the chief of police. Was the latter about to be eaten in his turn? The bear turned the motionless and paralyzed body and, afterwards, methodically, turned it back; then it seated itself upon its haunches, reflected for an instant and decided, like the good economist it was, that, having eaten enough for that day, and even for several days, it should reserve the rest of its provisions for a time of need.

It seized Yermac by the arm and, without sinking its pointed teeth too deeply in the flesh, dragged his body in the direction of a little clump of dwarf trees.

Arrived there, it dug a hiding-place in the earth with its nails, in which it carefully laid the chief of police.

The bear broke some small branches, artfully placed them over the food magazine it had just established, and covered the whole with snow, which it deftly projected with its hind paws, turning its back to the little mound.

This done, it went to complete its digestion somewhat further off, and, perhaps, to scoff at some brown confrere having a less keen scent and less activity.

Meanwhile, the fugitives—Yegor, Nadege, M. Lafleur, and the little Pole—after having escaped from the torrent of flames which ran from south to north, were returning, skirting the immense incandescent furnace, over the eastern road, by which Tekel and the liberating sledges would arrive in a few days.

They had heaped upon two of their horses, which they had succeeded in recovering, the pologue, some saved provisions, the arms and the clothing, and were progressing, Yegor and M. Lafleur each leading a horse by the bridle. They were advancing slowly by the intermittent light of the conflagration.

An hour after the burial of the chief of police, the fugitives reached the spot where the bloody fight between Yermac and the gold-robbers had occurred. They saw blood scattered about in profusion, and the remains of a devoured human corpse. All stood mute with amazement at this hideous spectacle. On looking closer, Ladislas perceived a trace of blood upon the snow, as if a wounded man had dragged himself away. He imparted his discovery to Nadege.

"There must be a wounded man not far from here!" cried the young girl. "See this blood, Monsieurs, and this trodden snow. Oh! if we have come soon enough to save one of our kind!"

"Let us look into this matter," said Yegor. They fastened the horses to the trees.

In a neighboring valley, a growl was heard. It was the bear with the white collar.

"We must not stray too far," said M. Lafleur, prudently holding his gun in his hand, prepared for whatever might happen.

The whole party advanced to the mound beneath which Yermac lay. This hiding place seemed mysterious to them.

Yegor and the little Pole got down upon their knees and scraped away the snow with their hands, while M. Lafleur, with his gun upon his shoulder, kept guard over them.

The snow removed and the branches taken from their position, in the light reflected by the clouds of smoke hovering over the forest in combustion, Yegor, Ladislas and Nadege saw a man—a dead man interred.

"A corpse!" exclaimed they, simultaneously, with different degrees of emotion.

A sigh answered them.

"He is not dead!" cried Yegor. And he felt his heart. "It beats strongly!" added he, full of hope.

"Oh! what good fortune for us!" cried Nadege. "My friends, we are allowed to do a good action—which will somewhat console us for the cruel extremities to which you were compelled to resort; you can restore this life in place of the other life in the defiles! Confidence, Yegor! This is a good omen for the success of your courageous enterprise."

The chief of police was placed in a sitting posture by Yegor, aided by M. Lafleur, who had forgotten the bear and its growls.

Yegor, frightened at seeing the distorted features and closed eyes of the chief of police, thought the sight a vision of the brain.

"Ah! Nadege!" cried he, "do not speak of that man of the defiles—you fill me with terror!"

M. Lafleur, with open mouth, was also staring with fright.

Yermac, at last, opened his eyes.

"Thank you!" said he.

"It is, indeed, the chief of police!" stammered Yegor, in extreme astonishment.

"Whoever you are, I thank you!" again said the exhumed man. "You have taken a heavy mountain from my breast."

The reflections of the conflagration grew more intense, suddenly increased, with cracklings indicating that the flames had found new food.

"What! is it you, Monsieur Semenoff!—is it you, Monsieur Lafleur! Do I owe my life to you—to you! Where is my son! What have they done with Dimitri! It is night—and I am wounded in the right arm—I am losing blood. Have you, Semenoff and M. Lafleur, come to finish me! Did you bury me alive beneath the snow, as the other day you strove to bury me alive beneath the rocks! That was cowardly. But explain yourselves—speak!"

Yegor and M. Lafleur had lost the power of speech. Nadege was on the point of fainting, and little Ladislas, after having retreated several steps, was making precipitate signs of the cross, one after another.

"Monsieur Yermac," said the exile, finally, "there is in all this the intervention of a higher power! It is to aid you that we are here. Fear nothing. And if I have done you grievous wrongs, I offer to repair them. But you yourself do not attribute to chance the strange circumstance that, after having left you for dead in the defiles of the Verkho-Yansk Mountains, we should disinter you in this spot. You are wounded; we will care for you."

M. Lafleur added a few words which enlightened the chief of police as to how he came in the hole. As a commentary, the bear was still growling in the distance. As a further proof, M. Lafleur showed the remains of the corpse spread out upon the ground. Everything was explained.

"I thank you, Messieurs," said Yermac, getting upon his feet. "I am in better condition than I thought. So we are quits, Monsieur Semenoff. Now, you can no longer deny that you are in full fight, you and she whom you call your betrothed, as well as her brother! I arrest you all three!"

Yegor made a movement, Nadege grew pale, and little Ladislas burst into tears; but M. Lafleur said, with a sneer:

"You are joking, my poor Yermac! Why, you can scarcely stand, you are alone, wounded, and far from all help—yet you talk as if you had a squad of Cossacks at your back! Don't get angry; we shall quietly proceed on our way—and if you are not satisfied, another time we will let the gun and snowing in his beat the very pistols in question."

"Keep those arms, my child," said M. Lafleur to him.

"So you disarm me. However, my safety demands—"

"We will protect you, Monsieur!" said the dancing-master.

"A moment will come, Monsieur Yermac," added Yegor, "when I will return to you even the governor general's gun, begging you to restore it to him with my compliments. Well, Messieurs, suppose we pitch our tents and prepare our camp for the night."

Meanwhile, the evening had arrived, and, in the distance, the last fires of the consumed forest were dying out.

CHAPTER XII.—A TREASURE-TROVE.

"You are our prisoner on parole," said M. Lafleur to the chief of police.

"I am your prisoner, if you will," answered the latter, "but you are none the less the prisoners of the Czar, arrested in the act of violating the law by me, Yermac, chief of police of Yakoutsk. Your friends remain accused of an attempt to escape with armed hand, and you are aiding them."

"I shall not try to wriggle out of that," said M. Lafleur.

It was not easy to make the arrangements for passing the night. The snow had again begun to fall. By the light of a lantern, Yegor and M. Lafleur made the couch of Nadege and her adopted brother against a high rock, using for that purpose the warmest furs they possessed. Some saplings formed the frame-work of a very low roof which they covered with thick cloth.

While these preparations were in progress, Nadege drew from her sack, which had happily escaped from the disaster, some blackish flour with which she half-filled a huge wooden porringer. She also poured in some cold water drawn from the torrent by Ladislas, and stirred the mixture with a spoon. The flour made of oats, dried in an oven and carefully sifted, swelled and overflowed the porringer. Nadege offered each one a share; after all, it was quite agreeable food.

Yegor, the Parisian, and Yermac at last rolled themselves in the remaining furs. The dog Wab commenced to walk around the tent and the bodies stretched upon the ground, which the snow began to cover. Under the animal's guard, everybody reposed from the multiplied emotions of the day.

The first to awake—it was the chief of police—perceived the companions of his open air slumbers looking like small mounds beneath their coverings of snow, which while imparting to them a certain amount of heat, gave them the appearance of lying under heaps of white feathers.

Yermac, disturbed by their immobility shook them.

M. Lafleur had some trouble to free his head. He appeared under the picturesque guise of the good man Winter, as seen in December in the windows of the Paris confectionary shops, with otter-skin wool pulled down about his eyes and spotted with snow, his hair powdered with hoar frost, his nose red and his garments as white as those of a miller.

"Ah!" cried he, giving himself a toss, "it is plainly to be seen that there are no gendarmes in the vicinity—otherwise, a slumberer beneath the stars in my vagabond condition could not be awakened by a member of the police force without danger of passing the succeeding nights in the seclusion of a cell!"

The chief remained impassible; and, though his arm torn by the bear caused him horrible sufferings, he allowed no evidence of it to be seen. M. Lafleur remembered his wound and wished to dress it; the chief of police mechanically allowed him to do so.

When the ex-herbalist had finished, he said:

"I presume that it is not your intention to remain eternally in this spot open to all the winds and exposed to every inclemency of the weather!"

"No," answered Yegor, joining the conversation, "we are waiting here for a native sent by us to Zachiversk, who is to bring us back two nartas drawn by reindeer."

"But—it seems to me that you are taking me into your confidence in regard—"

"To our plans!" interrupted Yegor. "Well, what of it! Your loyalty, despite the language you have used, is a guarantee to me that I can enter into a free explanation with you."

"You speak, perhaps, with too much confidence."

"We have a right to that confidence," observed the Parisian, "for without us, Monsieur Yermac, the bear with the white collar would have been digesting you at this moment!"

"Yes, yes—you count on holding me through gratitude."

"We must, for the reason I have stated," resumed Yegor, "remain as near as possible to the forest—I should say the site on which the forest stood. Can you account for this frightful disaster, Monsieur Yermac!"

"Yes," said the latter; "it was I who set fire to the forest."

bears of Siberia devour the agents of authority."

"You have strength on your side, Messieurs, but I represent the law," said the chief of police, with dignity.

"On the faith of a Parisian, what a singular pretension!" cried M. Lafleur.

"Strength should remain with the law," resumed Yermac.

"Well, if you have the strength, show it!" Yegor interposed:

"Do you know why you have not the strength, Yermac? Because your demand is not founded on justice. You have before you innocent victims—I pass over the tragic incidents of your pursuit. We are martyrs of oppression, and you cannot make the least impression on us by appealing to our consciences; that is why you are weak, without prestige and really disarmed."

"We shall see, Messieurs. You are going towards the east. I shall return towards the west. May each one of us keep his confidence."

M. Lafleur made a sign to Yegor. They consulted together hastily, while Yermac was looking at the roads, uncertain as to the direction he ought to take.

"You are in our power," said Yegor, to him.

"There are several of you and I am alone. The game is not equal. I submit," answered Yermac, whose visage, impenetrable as granite, betrayed not the least emotion.

"Your submission is not enough for us," said Yegor. "We may meet patrols, or stumble on some post of Cossacks. What would you do in that case?"

"My duty."

"You would denounce us!"

"Yes."

Yegor was silent for an instant, admiring the chief's firmness and courage, and thinking how he could secure his silence without staining himself with a crime.

"We could cause your death," said he, at length, "by fastening you to a tree; you would be devoured by the bears. But I wish you no harm. You have done your duty. Free, you were an obstacle in our path—that is why we wished to suppress you. Now that you are in our hands, now that fate has made you our prisoner, will you give us your word that you will not seek to escape from us?"

"No."

What a strange nature was that of Yermac, who discharged his policeman's functions without the least passion, with the absence of every interest. Duty and law!—these two words summed up for him life, the world and society. His conscience, pure, sincere, just and free from every secret end, had made him an austere, impassible and impenetrable man. He looked his adversaries in the face, as the lion looks at its foes. Disgusted at hiding himself, at crouching in a corner to await the passage of his prey and hurl himself upon it unexpectedly, he acted openly, loyally, even with those who were in insurrection against the law.

"Monsieur, the chief of police of Yakoutsk," said M. Lafleur, "we cannot see things in the same light as you; you will remain with us, if you please, until we judge you retreat indifferent to our safety; you are our prisoner!"

"But I am wounded!"

"Another reason for remaining with us. I will cure you; I know all about wounds."

"You!—a dancing-master!—a maker of women's hats!—a manufacturer of champagne!"

"I began life as an herbalist, Monsieur! But have you no weapons!"

"I had a gun and pistols," said the chief of police, looking in the direction of the field of strife,

As he finished speaking, Ladislas advanced, bearing slung across his back the very

"You!" cried the fugitives in one voice.

"To dislodge you—I could not indefinitely await your good pleasure."

"But, wretch," exclaimed Yegor, "you ran the risk of roasting us alive!"

"Of course; I knew I was exposing you to that."

"And you did not shrink from such a horrible deed!" said Nadege.

"Well," observed M. Lafleur, "we are indeed, square with you; we were so, I see even before the episode of the bear. Between us, the rock in the defiles was a mere nothing compared to the means you employ when you set yourself to work!"

"And the attack beside the pool!" said the chief of police.

"We are square with you, I tell you," replied the Parisian. "Twice, it is true, you have escaped. But we were four in danger of death. Count up for yourself! You are still indebted to us for what we did for you in releasing you from the hiding-place of the bear with the white collar, the Ursus Collarius!"

"For a scientific man, you are a keen calculator, M. Lafleur!"

"Because I am somewhat of a merchant also, and know how to keep books. Your account balanced, I charge you anew with a miraculous resurrection!"

"And your doctor's fees!"

"I pass them to profit and loss."

M. Lafleur, as he talked, beat his sides as the coachmen are accustomed to do in Paris That, however, did not prevent him from being ready with his replies.

That day was marked by a discovery made by Ladislas after breakfast—a breakfast which vied in frugality with the supper of the previous evening.

With the aid of a few small branches, the lad had cleared away the snow from the vicinity of Nadege's little tent. He then sat down on the ground, and, as he had seen M. Lafleur pick up pebbles and examine them to see if they were worthy of figuring in the new collection he had commenced, Ladislas imitated his actions.

His eye was particularly attracted towards quite a large number of small, round stones

The color of police heard these words and

"I tell you, Mademoiselle, that they are marvelous emeralds, the equals of which, perhaps, no court in Europe possesses. They are worth many thousands of dollars."

"Are you certain, M. Lafleur?" asked Nadege, who already saw in perspective superb adornments for Grand occasions.

"What luck! These are green emeralds of rare size and great value."

M. Lafleur, who arrived unexpectedly, was struck by the form and color of the stones, and upon examining them, exclaimed:

"These are green emeralds of a yellowish green, worse by upon us having displayed them for Nadege's admiration, again squatted on the ground and began to throw them into the air, one after another, catching them in one hand with the address of a juggler.

approached, followed by Yegor.

"Look, Monsieur," said Ladislas to him "M. Lafleur asserts that these are emeralds!"

"I can readily believe it," answered Yermac, after a brief examination.

"There can be no doubt about it," said M. Lafleur. "Glance at this one which is broken; the break has the requisite glassiness and roughness."

"I have made a good day's work, it seems!" cried the child.

"My little friend," said the chief of police, "you, perhaps, do not know that all the precious stones discovered in Siberia belong to the Czar! These must be sent to him without retaining any!"

"You are joking, Monsieur Yermac!" said Yegor. "Always the Czar!"

"But it is the law."

"Must we retrace our steps to lay at the feet of the Emperor these gewgaws with the like of which his treasury abounds?"

"You are having your little laugh. I will charge myself with transporting them—without in the least incommoding you."

"It is you who are laughing now—and at our expense," replied Yegor.

"Well, I see I must do as you like in this matter and must limit myself to making a note of the discovery."

"Make as many notes as you please, my dear Monsieur Yermac," said M. Lafleur. "and make them at your ease. For our part we shall carefully put aside these little pebbles. They will be souvenirs of our rough experiences and of the time we passed in your company."

The incident had no other result.

One day, two days passed; it was just as much less to wait for the arrival of the nartas. The snow, which fell at shorter and shorter intervals, commenced to harden. The great highway of flight was preparing—broad, level, and as vast as possible.

The chief of police, his right arm in a sling, aided Nadege in the preparation of the food. To the dry fish and smoked salmon which the Russians called oukale, some of Yegor's happy shots added a white hare and two heath-cocks; finally, M. Lafleur killed a wild ram, which promised for the succeeding meals passable cutlets and legs of mutton.

The third day, at supper time, the bivouac fire attracted a native woman, who, in regaining her yourte, had strayed a little from her road.

On hearing the snow crack, the guests of the desert raised their heads and saw a miserable, almost repulsive-looking being, covered with a tattered animal skin. The unfortunate nomad, with bronzed complexion, high cheek bones and small, half-open eyes, seemed to have a nursling under the breast of her garment.

Nadege quickly approached her, made her seat herself beside the fire, and offered her a part of a fowl, which the woman devoured, casting her hard, black eyes around her. Upon her bosom moved a living creature carefully enveloped.

"Well, nurse," said M. Lafleur, "might one see the baby?"

The Yakoute understood the gesture which accompanied the Parisian's question, uttered in a strange jargon in which Russian, French, and the Yakoute language were mingled.

She gently and maternally drew aside the reindeer skin which covered her shoulder, and displayed three little blue foxes.

The stupefaction was general. M. Lafleur, however, soon explained to everybody that it is the prevailing custom among the fur-hunters to carry off the young foxes to raise with the intention of selling the fur when the animals have attained their full development. And, while talking of the fur of the blue foxes, the Parisian laughed heartily at the credulity with which the ladies of the west, especially the English ladies, array themselves in what purports to be the genuine article. He informed Nadege that the four feet of the animal alone are utilized by the furriers, which makes a pelisse cost in Russia seven or eight thousand dollars. The feet only are sold by the hunters. The rest of the fur is thrown in, as having no value.

Ladislas questioned and, while the native was voraciously finishing her repast, M. Lafleur gave the curious child some details concerning the habits of the blue foxes. He told him that, exceedingly suspicious and employing a thousand artful tricks against the hunters, they leave their burrows only at night.

Voracious and given to theft, they steal everything from the hunters and even garments from sleeping men; they devour the corpses and attack the sick. When travelers bury food, placing numerous heavy stones over the earth which covers it, the foxes rob the hiding-place by gliding beneath the stones, aiding each other in the work with harmony and rare intelligence. If the provisions be elevated in the air on a pole, the foxes dig with their paws until the pole falls, or even with wonderful dexterity make a short ladder to reach the coveted prey.

"The blue fox," continued M. Lafleur, "is found on all the shores of the Arctic Ocean and on the banks of the rivers which flow into it. It is smaller than the common fox, which it greatly resembles, but its head is more like that of a dog. Its hair is very long, very thick and very soft to the touch—it is grayish blue or white. The tip of its muzzle is black and its ears are nearly round. Its voice is at once like the bark of a dog and the yelp of a fox. These animals are always met in considerable bands; they prefer open and cold places.

"It is a curious fact," added he, "that the blue fox, far from fearing the water as do the other foxes, easily crosses the arms of rivers or lakes to reach islands that it may ravage the nests of aquatic birds. When game vanishes from a region, the blue foxes emigrate in a body, which is a habit very rare among carnivorous animals.

"I had," M. Lafleur pursued, "for my Chateau-Thierry collection, superb specimens of the skins of all the Siberian foxes, but, alas! my collection is to be made over again—I can never return to Yakoutsk," added he, sadly.

After having eaten, the Yakoute woman asked permission to sleep beside the blessed fire, which was granted by Nadege. She stretched herself out upon the snow and, drawing over her face and shoulders her sayanak of reindeer skin, began to snore. The little blue foxes, closely pressed to her bosom, paid her in warmth for the maternal care she bestowed upon them.

ON TOP OF THE MOUNTAIN.

'Fidelis' Writes Up all the Important Happenings of That High Altitude.

'Rob't J. Haynes and wife returned from Niagara and other points of interest on Tuesday.

Last Friday the Howell family of Atchison, Kansas, took their departure for their beautiful and princely home in that gay little city. It is a long time since a family left the hotel so generally missed, not only by the inmates of the hotel to whom they were gracious and uniformally kind, but to the neighborhood in general, Mrs. Nolan accompanied them as far as Tyrone.

Miss Hughes, of Bddford, is at present the guest of the Rev. Cadle, pastor o the M. E. church,

Mrs. Best and daughter, Mrs. Atkins and two children, took their departure for their home in Washington D. C. on Wednesday morning.

Miss Mary Gilliland, of Karthaus, returned Tuesday evening from a visit to Milesburg and Bellefonte.

Mrs. Saucer and pretty little daughter of Tyrone, are the guests of Miss Sallie Stewart, of White Villa.

Mrs. Cameron Boak, daughter Edith and son Raymond returned home from Kentucky last Saturday afternoon after an absence of two months.

Little Sallie, Sister of Dr. Neff, who has of late gladdened her brother's home with her bright little smiles, left for her home last Friday. Allie Buddinger, another of our attractive little Snow Shoe friends, is visiting her grandmother, Mrs. Leathers.

Mr. Thos. Maher, the genial proprietor of the Potter House at Karthaus, was tn town Tuesday to witness the Base Ball game.

Mr. James Stott, of Bellefonte, with his interesting family is spending a very pleasant time at the home of Mrs. Stott's father, Mr. Wm. Lucas, one of our courteous and obliging merchants.

The venerable Mr. Beates, of Stormstown, is the guest of O. M. Sheets.

There will be quite a large Fishing party go up the river this Thursday Over fifty invitations were sent out, and the majority accepted.

Mrs. Nolan and daughter Stella spent Tuesday in Williamsport.

Miss Forshce, of Philipsburg, is at present the guest of Mr James Zimmerman.

Miss Lizzie Roh is entertainin Miss Mauvey, of Northumberlrnd.

The "Annie Rooney" nine, who played against the Snow Shoe 'team' were entertained at the Washington House by our genial townsman, J. G. Uzzell. The score was 9 to 16. It is only fair to say that only part of the nine were present A. J. Hayns, Jr., one of the heaviest batgers, was obliged to be in Bellefonte on official business. The catcher was no there, and Rote, second baseman, had one of his finger nails crushed off the evening before. Mr. Brown, first baseman, made a double play—only half of which was counted. Mr. Kane, the pitcher of the Snow Shoe nine did most excellent playing all through. Geo. Roth also deserves special mention. The whole game was marked by good feeling with no wrangling. The 'Annie Rooneys' are certainly a gentlemanly and generous set of base ballists.

Seven Barns Burned.

The Sullivan County Review says: It is said that seven barns were burned in this county Saturday night during the severe electric storm. We have learned of four as follows: Barn of Henry Bedford, in Elkland township, containing sixty tons of hay, quantity of wheat in sheaf, threshing machine and corn, all destroyed. Insured.

Barn of Curtis Rumsey, in Forks township, containing about thirty five tons of hay and other articles. All destroyed. Insured.

Barn of Reuben Brown, Fox township, containing hay, grain, etc. Also a barn on property of Joseph Batton, in Fox township. Lightning was the cause of all the damage.

Mourning Stamps Wanted.

A lady has written to Postmaster General Wanamaker suggesting the propriety of a mourning stamp. To enforce her idea she pointed out the absurdity of affixing a giddy red, blue, or green stamp to an envelope edged with black, and begged him to consider the interests of the widow and fatherless. The Postmaster General responded gravely and sympathetically, acknowledging the justice of the lady's observations, and promising to give her question serious consideration.

A Centenarian.

We were recently shown one of the old "Grandfather's Clocks" by Mr. D. T Meyer, which is a unique relic of the eighteenth century. The clock which is eight feet high, was built in Aaronsburg, Centre county, in 1782, and has been keeping correct time ever since. The pendulum is two and a half feet long and the weights weigh twelve and thirteen pounds. The clock has an interesting history, and is prized very highly by the owner, Mr. Meyer.—Osceola Leader.

Among the singular differences between the two sides of the face, a German professor notes that the right ear is almost invariably higher than the left.

Terror Stricken Passengers.

The steamer Portia which arrived at Halifax on August 4 from St. John's N. F., had a very narrow escape from destruction on her way from Roley's Island. On July 30, when near Fogo Head, a huge iceberg was noticed dead ahead. The steamer sailed close along side of it, and while passing the glittering mass a terrible report was heard which shook the ship, and the berg broke into three pieces, each piece going under the water with a roar and crash like thunder. The steamer slid up on the third piece, which tipped over, holding her for a while clear out of the water. For a time it looked to all on board as though sudden death was inevitable, but in a moment the sea, which had hitherto been as placid as a millpond, suddenly became a surging mass. The driving sea rushed down upon the Portia and lifted her off the ice into the water.

On examining the ship it was found that stanchions in the saloon had been displaced and bent, and the under-girders of the dining table smashed. Captain Ash was at his Post on the bridge at the time of the accident. After the report he saw a third on the berg tip over and slowly rise from the water. The engines were stopped. Had this order not been promptly executed the steamer would have gone down when lifted from the ice by the seas. The excitement among the passengers was intense. The captain and chief officers shouted immediately to the passengers to keep cool. The terrified passengers grew calmer, and almost immediately afterward the Portia was in clear water and out of danger. The bow of the ship was damaged by the ice, and a portion of the forward apartment was flooded.

A CRISIS APPROACHING.

Mr. Webb Is Defiant and the Labor Leaders are Consulting.

A GREAT TIE UP IMMINENT.

Mr. Powderly Says That Matters Have Reached a Most Serious and Critical Point, and Mr. Webb Says He Will Spend Two Millions to Win.

NEW YORK, Aug. 20.—Mr. Powderly and Secretary Hayes arrived here Tuesday morning at 8 o'clock from Buffalo. Grand Chief Sargent, of the Federation of Labor, S. E. Wilkinson, of the Trainmen's association; Chairman George Howard, of the Railway Conductors' association, and Grand Master Sweeny, of the Switchmen's association, are at the Grand Union hotel. On all sides rumors are flying, and important developments are hourly expected.

Vice President Webb said: "For the past few days I have been making arrangements to get a new force of firemen in case those on the road go out, and I have so far succeeded that any delay from that cause will only be temporary. I have enough assurances from the firemen on my road to convince me that in case they are ordered out a number of them will not go.

"Then, if necessary, I will stop every particle of freight traffic, close up every yard and keep them closed until I have obtained a sufficient number of new firemen to resume the freight traffic. This, I think, I can accomplish within forty-eight hours, as I have long lists of men who will come at the wages we will pay."

In conclusion he said: "My road will expend $2,000,000, and in this I am backed up by the stockholders." Up to 11 o'clock no meeting of the labor leaders had been held.

What Powderly Says.

Mr. Powderly said: "Matters connected with the New York Central trouble have reached a most serious and critical point and one that will interest the people of this country more than they imagine at the present time.

"I do not mean to say that there will be a general strike, and I do not deny it. There will be a meeting of the general executive board of the Knights of Labor, which will be attended by the representatives of the trainmen, firemen, switchmen and conductors, and at that meeting final action will be taken."

Freight Completely Blocked.

BUFFALO, N. Y., Aug. 20.—There was but little change to be noted either in the strike situation or the condition of the Central's freight traffic Tuesday morning. The new yard conductors and brakemen brought from the east are slow at getting acquainted with the yards and are awkward at the work. Several have had narrow escapes from being injured. A Boston man named Gue was thrown from the top of a car and narrowly escaped being killed.

The outlook today is anything but hopeful for the speedy removal of freight. The yards are as completely blocked as they were Monday, while the long lines of freight cars on side tracks extend for miles. In the east bound yard the men have managed to make room for several trains, which were pushed in. The Lake Shore freight is moving briskly compared with what has been done for several days. The strikers remain quiet and there is no sign of any disturbance anywhere.

The Pivotal Moment.

This is considered by the strikers to be the pivotal moment, and all eyes are turned anxiously toward New York, where the head men of the great labor federation are in council. Mr. Lee received a cipher message from Trenholm, the contents of which have not been divulged, but a leading striker said there is every probability that the members of that body will go out if the Central trouble is not settled in a day or two. The K. of L. firemen on the lake boats are prepared to go out if any attempt is made to handle non-union freight by that route.

Railroad men who have been talked with admit that at no time since the strike began has the outlook been so ominous as now. All concede that the probabilities are that the strike will be ended in a day or it will spread to about all the branches of the operating department, and if need be to the other roads in the Vanderbilt system.

Something Will Drop.

ALBANY, Aug. 20.—Thursday was the quietest day of the strike, and the strikers, while gathering in their regular places, were very reticent. One of them said: "We are waiting for something, and when that something comes it will be the biggest bombshell that has exploded yet."

The knights issued the following bulletin: "The railroad people claim that they are rapidly breaking the blockade and that their freight will be all moving regularly inside of three days, but the West Albany yards are crippled again by the refusal of twenty of the new men to go to work. The Pinkerton men have in a great measure been withdrawn and the city police are doing splendid work."

Beaten by Strikers.

NEW YORK, Aug. 20.—Frank Allen, of Tarrytown, N. Y., who applied for work on the New York Central Tuesday morning, was set upon by the strikers and very badly beaten. He had his injuries attended to at the Roosevelt hospital and was sent back to Tarrytown.

She Was the Last of the Tribe.

UPPER SANDUSKY, O., Aug. 20.—Margaret Solomon, better known as Mother Solomon, the last of the tribe of Wyandotte Indians, died yesterday in her home north of this city on the banks of the Sandusky river. She was a full blooded Wyandotte, the daughter of John Gray Eyes, a noted chief. She was born in 1816 and when in 1821 the Rev. Mr. Finley opened his mission school Margaret Gray Eyes was the first Indian child brought to be instructed. When the Indians went west in 1843 she went with them. Some years ago, after her husband, John Solomon, died, she returned and bought the home where she lived quietly and alone.

Preparing for Trouble.

DANVILLE, Ills., Aug. 20.—The Chicago and Eastern Illinois and the Ohio and Indiana Coal railroads are laying in full supplies and making other arrangements for a strike of their engineers, firemen and trainmen, which is likely to occur this week. The men want higher wages and more extra time on the run between Danville and Chicago. They will have a final audience with President Porter in Chicago next Friday.

A BRAVE LITTLE HERO.

He Saves Two Youngsters at the Risk of His Own Life.

CANARSIE BAY, L. I., Aug. 20.—Little Johnnie Finn and his brother Charlie are very much afraid of dogs. So when a big, inquisitive St. Bernard came up to them while they were standing near the edge of the biggest dock at Canarsie and commenced to sniff at their little legs they gave one very loud screech and tumbled head first into the waters of the bay. They couldn't swim even a little bit, and before they knew it they were going down for the last time clasped in each other's chubby arms. A last painful gurgle escaped from the little brothers as the water closed over their curly heads.

There were not many persons around at that trying moment, and only one heard the appeal for help. That one was a youth of 16, Joseph McHenry by name. He was sitting on a bench with his back toward the scene of the struggle in the water. When he heard their feeble cry for help he dived to the rescue.

The brave lad had thrown off his coat and hat, and, incumbered by his shoes and other clothing, started in to save life. He managed to come up a few strokes from the spot where the boys sank, and was just in time to grab them as they were going down the fatal third time. The brothers caught hold of their rescuer when they felt his grasp upon them, and then ensued a battle for life.

Joseph struggled manfully to keep all three up, but twice the little Finns pushed him under, and the last time he thought it was all up with him; but he didn't release his hold upon the drowning boys, and kept kicking his legs and working his free arm with a vigor wondrous to see in a lad of his age. At last he began to grow weak from his exertion, and if the Finns hadn't also been more dead than alive he probably never would have seen shore again.

He began to think that he could not save the little fellows, when around the dock came a boat in which was Conductor James Callaghan, rowing as fast as he possibly could.

In less time than it takes to tell it the boat was alongside and Johnnie, Charlie and their rescuer were dragged into it one after the other. Johnnie and Charlie were unconscious, and Joseph was so weakened that he couldn't sit up in the bottom of the boat.

The trio were soon in the conductor's home, where timely aid and restoratives brought them around all right. The rescue was one of the most thrilling ever witnessed here, and the few persons who saw the latter part of it have done nothing since but praise the work of brave Joseph McHenry.

STOLEN BY GYPSIES.

This Was Forty Years Ago, and His Identity Just Disclosed.

MOLINE, Ills., Aug. 20.—Forty years ago Hiram Gregg, 8 years old, disappeared from the home of his parents in Elmira, N. Y. Search was instituted and kept up for several months, but without result. The parents removed to the west some time afterward, and finally settled near this place.

Yesterday a man of 48 appeared at the Gregg homestead, and announced himself as the boy who disappeared forty years ago. According to his story he was stolen by gypsies, who took him to Wisconsin. He was cruelly used by his captors, and oftentimes had been beaten and threatened with death.

About fifteen years ago Hiram married, and his gypsy foster mother disappeared. Hiram and his wife took up their residence at Richardson, Oak county, Wis., where they lived until a mysterious communication was received by Hiram telling him his real name and that his mother was living near Moline. This led to an investigation which resulted in the meeting. It is presumed that the letter was written by one of the gypsies in a fit of remorse.

"Skinflint" Peaslo in Trouble.

HAVERHILL, Mass., Aug. 20.—M. F. Peaslo has been arrested charged with the larceny of a diamond ring, which he pawned in Boston for $18. He is confined in a padded cell, where he has suffered several fits. He is a wreck bodily and mentally. A few years ago he was widely known in Boston and other cities as a seller of prize candy packages, and his notoriety was increased by long attacks in the New York papers, calling him "Skinflint" Peaslo.

Her Dress Aflame from a Gas Jet.

ASBURY PARK, N. J., Aug. 20.—The wife of Dr. D. M. Barr, proprietor of Hygenic institute, at Ocean Grove, was seriously burned by her dress igniting from a gas jet. A servant was also severely injured in an effort to rescue Mrs. Barr and extinguish the flames.

TWO FATAL ACCIDENTS.

A Fall from a Masthead and a Shot Through the Head.

WHITESTONE LANDING, L. I., Aug. 20.—A terrible accident occurred off Whitestone Point last evening on the bark Onway, bound for Valparaiso. From the masthead of the vessel the mate, Thomas Meinz, fell a distance of nearly fifty feet. His neck and back were broken, producing instant death. Coroner Corey, of College Point, was summoned and removed the remains to an undertaker's establishment.

Another accident occurred a few hours afterward, when a woman on one of several sand scows bound for Cow bay was shot in the head by excursionists on a passing yacht. Dr. Bleecker, of Whitestone village, hurried to the pier, and pronounced her case a precarious one.

The scows belong to Reid & Murray, of New York. The captain of the tug Volunteer, which was towing the barges, landed here and made a statement to Judge Mackenna, who has set the case down for Wednesday.

The captain of the yacht states that the occupants of his boat fired salutes at the passing tow, and did not think that the shots intended for a customary recognition would result so seriously.

Pugilist Lannon Matched.

BOSTON, Aug. 20.—Joe Lannon, the heavy weight pugilist, is a happy bridegroom. He was united in marriage to Miss Lizzie Mooney, of South Boston. The ceremony took place in the rectory of St. Augustine's church, and Father O'Holland officiated. After the articles of agreement in this new match had been sanctioned by the happy couple they were driven to the home of the groom's mother, 91 Mercer street, where they received congratulations and wedding presents from many friends. In one corner of the parlor was a fine upright piano, a present to the bride. The sporting fraternity came to the front in great shape to give Joe their best wishes, and the bride's friends were numerous. The bridal pair started on their wedding tour Tuesday morning. New York, Washington and Philadelphia will be visited.

He Can Solve Chicago's Problem.

PITTSBURG, Aug. 20.—Col. Andrews, of this city, an engineer of note, has sent a representative to Chicago with plans that promise, if adopted, to extricate that city from the World's fair dilemma. His plans have been carefully surveyed, and embody 160 acres of land and 100 acres of water on the lake front in Chicago. The engineer promises a larger and better area with these figures than can possibly be made otherwise. He puts the cost at $7,500,000, and will put up at any time a bond of $500,000 to $1,000,000 if his plans are agreed to.

A Flame Swept Town.

ELDORADO, Kan., Aug. 20.—Fire destroyed a large portion of the business part of Augusta, a small town near Eldorado. The fire began in the Mayle building and destroyed the building, in which were The Augusta Journal and two law libraries, the Richardson building and stock, the Viets Clothing company's building and stock, and the Haines hardware establishment.

School of Methods.

On Wednesday morning, Aug. 6th, the first session of the School of Methods was opened by Mrs. Caroline E. Ruell, of Chicago, who conducted a prayer and consecration service. An organization was then effected by the election of officers, which was as follows: Mrs. M K Morrison, President; Mrs. W H Woods, Secretary, and Mrs. W S Baker, Treasurer.

Mrs. Mary Lovell, of Bryn Mawr, State Superintendent of Scientific Temperance Instructions, then addressed the workers on this very important subject.

In the afternoon a bible reading was given by Mrs. Strawinski. In the absence of Mrs. E D Mair, of Pittsburgh, railroad work was opened by Mrs. Buell and was followed by others who had taken particular interest in the work.

In the evening Mrs. Buell conducted a parliamentary drill and this ended her work here for the time. She was called away by a telegram informing her of the death of a near relative. All who heard Mrs. Buell were delighted with her, and we hope she may do us good by coming to us again.

On Thursday morning Mrs. J P Harris, president of Centre county W C T U. opened with a bible reading. Mrs. Lovell then introduced work among Foreigners, and the subject of Health and Heredity was opened by Mrs. J A McKee.

Miss Ida Schock, state organizer of Y. W. work gave a Bible reading at 1.30 p. m., after which Mrs. O. P. Amies, of Scranton conducted a children's meeting, and the children were delighted with her stories which were instructive and entertaining.

Mrs. Schock addressed the workers on Y. Work and in the evening Mrs. Lovell lectured on Bands of Mercy. Each day the noon-tide hour of prayer was observed.

To the regret of all concerned the program for Friday could not be carried out because of the storm.

At an executive meeting on Friday the following resolutions were adopted:

Resolved, That the most cordial thanks of all white ribboners convened in the School of Methods at the Juniata Valley camp grounds, be extended to the association for the use of their grounds and tents; to the individual members of the association for their untiring co-operation, without which the undertaking would not have been a success, and to the Baker family for their fine vocal and instrumental music which so especially added to the enjoyment of all the meetings.

Take Care of Your Health.

The State Board of Health has issued a circular of explanations and directions for guarding against cholera morbus, diarrhœa and dysentery, from which the following is taken:

Cholera morbus is caused by improper food and sudden chilling of the body after exposure to great heat. Certain substances will produce it in certain persons, such for instance as veal, raw milk taken with fish, or shell fish, and all dishes cooked with milk, such as rice pudding, cream puffs and even ice cream, when kept too long. Unripe and over-ripe fruit, especially if taken with large draughts of ice water, will also cause it. But sound, ripe fruit is a natural food in hot weather and wholesome. Avoid becoming chilled during sleep. In a climate as changeable as ours, a light blanket should always be at hand, to be drawn up in case it suddenly becomes cold during the night.

Persistent summer diarrhoea is usually caused by malaria, sewer air or impure water. The conditions liable to contaminate air and water should be carefully sought out and remedied. The water can be rendered safe by boiling. As dysentery is often epidemic, it is wise to consider every case as a possible source of danger to others, and to disinfect the discharges with the greatest care.

An Office Seeker.

A South Carolina office seeker named Coleman announces his candidacy in the following choice words, selected with great care from Webster's Unabridged Dictionary and other sources: To the good people of Edgefield:

The wind blotheth where it listheth, and no man can tell whence it cometh or whither it goeth, but I am not that kind of a cat. I am a Ben Tillman cat and if elected County Commissioner probase to reform, beautify, adorn, resuscitate, rejuvinate, rehabilitate Edgefield county from the edge of the water up to the top of the rocks. I am a laboring man and haul wood. If not elected I can haul on. I would say more but I am a man of few words.

Merit Wins.

We desire to say to our citizens, that for years we have been selling Dr King's New Discovery for Consumption, Dr King's New Life Pills, Bucklen's Arnica Salve and Electric Bitters, and have never handled remedies that sell as well, or that have given such universal satisfaction. We do not hesitate to guarantee them every time, and we stand ready to refund the purchase price, if satisfactory results do not follow their use. These remedies have won their great popularity purely on their merits.

After taking two bottles the pimples and blotches entirely disappeared, and my skin is clear and without a blemish."

Vintage of Grapes for Invalids.

The Port Grape wine of New Jersey is the best medical wine in the market, and it is said that the vintage of Alfred Speer far excels any other produced. It is heavy in body, rich in flavor, and well adapted for sickly persons and for general family use. It makes new blood and gives color to the pale and sickly. Leading physicians prescribe this wine in their practice, and use it at their own homes. Druggists sell it.

St Jacobs Oil Cures

PROMPTLY AND PERFECTLY

BRUISES, SWELLINGS, CUTS, &c.

A bruise is a contusion; swellings are inflammations; cuts and wounds are alike disturbances to natural action, through which the veins are clogged, circulation impeded, congestion sets in and pains ensue. Nature is impatient—it tries to right itself and pain intensifies. Bruises and swellings need a soothing influence, but in cuts and wounds hardly any one would pour a liquid remedy into a gaping wound. So soon as nature brings the parts together, almost at once,

St Jacobs Oil soothes clears away obstructions, heals the injured tissues and restores. Used according to directions, it helps nature and cures

Take Care, There is Danger

In allowing inactivity of the kidneys to grow through neglect. The deadly shoals of Bright's disease and diabetes will wreck the goodly bark of health if it is allowed to drift rudderless upon them. The bladder too, if inactive, and judicious medication does not speedily direct the helm toward the port of safety, will be whelmed by the quicksand of disease. In selecting a diuretic, let your choice fall upon Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, which stimulates the renal organs without irretating and exciting them, two effects to be apprehended from the unmedicated stimuli largely resorted to. These have a tendency to react prejudicially. The Bitters invigorate the kidneys and bladder, in common with the nerves and digestive organs and so afford lasting aid. It also affords dual assistance in preventing and curing intermittent and remittent fever. Billiousness constipation and rhuematism it also subjugates. tf.

THE BRAKES FAILED TO WORK.

Result, Seven Persons Killed and Fourteen Badly Injured.

TRINIDAD, Colo., Aug. 20.—A frightful wreck occurred yesterday near Barela, twelve miles south of here, by which seven persons were killed and fourteen injured.

The wrecked train left Trinidad early yesterday morning with a number of workmen, who were detailed to repair a bridge that had been washed out just below Barela, on the Union Pacific railroad.

On approaching the scene of the washout, for some reason not yet learned, the brakes failed to work, the engineer was unable to stop his train in time and all the cars were ditched.

The workmen were gathered on one of the cars chatting and smoking their pipes.

They felt a sudden jar as the trainmen attempted to apply the brakes, and the next moment the car toppled into the stream with the rest of the train.

The stream was unusually high, owing to recent rains, and those of the seven who were not instantly killed were drowned like rats in a trap. Nearly all the men who were not killed were more or less seriously injured.

One of the survivors ran all the way to Barela, and sent a telegram to Trinidad for assistance. A special train was made up at once, and all the surgeons that could be obtained left for the scene of the accident.

Everything possible was done for the wounded, who were brought back to Trinidad late last night.

A SERIOUS ACCIDENT.

Ten People Killed and Twenty Injured in a Railroad Smash Up.

BOSTON, Aug. 20.—Tuesday afternoon a call for surgeons and ambulances was received at police headquarters in Boston on account of a serious accident on the Old Colony railroad at Braintree.

It is reported that eight persons besides the engineer and fireman were killed and twenty persons injured in a railroad wreck on the Old Colony railroad, near Braintree.

The accident occurred at 10 o'clock Tuesday morning near President's Bridge. The engine toppled over and the first car fell on top of it, setting fire to the train.

Two Vessels Reported Lost.

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 20.—A sailor who shipped on the American bark Portland Lloyds at Valparaiso, Chili, has written his mother in this city an account of a terrible storm in Valparaiso bay. The following are extracts from the letter: "July 2—Blowing a gale and the waves are breaking over the city. The shipping is in great danger. Nova Scotia ship, English bark and steamboat went down last night. The bark went ashore near Consulan and the Nova Scotia ship is on the rocks, fast going to pieces." The letter was evidently sent on board the mail steamer going north before the storm abated. Since then no advices have been received as to whether the Portland Lloyds and other vessels weathered the gale or not.

Be Sure

If you have made up your mind to buy Hood's Sarsaparilla do not be induced to take any other. Hood's Sarsaparilla is a peculiar medicine, possessing, by virtue of its peculiar combination, proportion, and preparation, curative power superior to any other article. A Boston lady who knew what she wanted, and whose example is worthy imitation, tells her experience below:

To Get

"In one store where I went to buy Hood's Sarsaparilla the clerk tried to induce me buy their own instead of Hood's; he told me their's would last longer; that I might take it on ten days' trial; that if I did not like it I need not pay anything, etc. But he could not prevail on me to change. I told him I knew what Hood's Sarsaparilla was. I had taken it, was satisfied with it, and did not want any other.

Hood's

When I began taking Hood's Sarsaparilla I was feeling real miserable, suffering a great deal with dyspepsia, and so weak that at times I could hardly stand. I looked, and had for some time, like a person in consumption. Hood's Sarsaparilla did me so much good that I wonder at myself sometimes, and my friends frequently speak of it." MRS. ELLA A. GOFF, 61 Terrace Street, Boston.

Mr. Klein does not claim that it cures all ailments; but it is considered by all who know the goods; that it is a fine stimulant; that it is used in City Hospitals; that Physicians recommend it; nay prescribe it, and that it strengthens the weak. It is also admitted by all who know Mr. Max Klein that his many years in business have fitted him not only to deal fairly with the world, but made him the leader of his line in our state. CAPE MAY GOSSIP.

From our regular correspondent.

CAPE MAY POINT, N. J., Aug. 14, 1890.

Owing to the delightful weather, and the incalculable benefits derived from the sea breezes, the Presidential family will probably protract their stay until the latter part of the month. Both the President and Mrs. Harrison have derived great benefit by their sojourn here, and Mrs. Harrison is so much in love with the place, that it is questionable whether she can be prevailed upon to leave it until the first of September.

Her out-door sketching, too, has given her incalculable pleasure, and her daily rambles among the picturesque nooks and corners of the pretty beach and country, have bound her to the resort with the tenderest cords of affection imaginable. Although the President goes out less than Mrs. Harrison, his fondness for the Point is quite as strong in every respect. He derives pleasure sitting upon his second-story piazza, studying the waves as they romp merrily along the coast.

The view from the cottage porch is most inviting. To the right of the cottage, the broad smooth expanse of the Delaware Bay, always dotted with sail, affords an ever pleasing panorama for both eye and mind. The ocean steamers, with their precious cargoes of human life and costly merchandise, are easily discernible as they pass in and out the capes, and the President seems to take great pleasure in watching their coming and going. To the left of the house, toward Cape May, the ever-changing ocean, with its heaving, restless bosom, and swift tides and currents, presents one of the grandest spectacles ever held by man. One never wearies of watching the broad Atlantic, whether it be in storm or sunshine. Its inconstant character and its sublime magnificence fire the soul with admiration for Him who holds the great water in the hollow of His hand. It is no wonder the President enjoys this view, and it is not surprising, therefore, that he dislikes being molested when in the act of drinking in its rich beauties.

Straight away from the cottage, across the entrance to the bay, the bright sands of Cape Henlopen loom up in the sunlight, forming a most beautiful sea view. The smoke of the great steamers, as they apparently creep lazily along the channel, extends for miles and miles over the horizon, and blends so imperceptably with the atmosphere, that it is difficult to decide which is smoke and which is cloud. A dreamy, haze-like vapor, hovers around this portion of the view, at certain hours of the day, making the scene bewitching enchanting at one moment and strong, sharp and decided at another.

At evening, when darkness falls gently over the landscape, and the lighthouse across the bay and the vessels at anchor, display their lights, the prospect undergoes another pleasing change. This is nthe most beautiful hour at the Point, and few visitors care to remain in door. The board-walk suddenly becomes alive with slowly moving pedestrians, who are out to take their last look at the closing day.

This is the moment when the hotels and cottages send out their contingents of pretty girls. They invade the promenade from one end to the other, and usually outnumber the boys three to one. But they are happy and seemingly do not care whether there be beaux to go round or not. It is a common thing to see young gentleman escorting six and sometimes a dozen of the fairest daughters of Eve, that the Sun ever shown upon. I have frequently referred to the beauty of the Cape May Point girls, but my feeble descriptions have failed in doing them justice. Health paints their cheeks with roses, and the peculiar condition of the air causes their flesh to assume a porous waxy look, which is beautiful beyond description. The climate, also, exerts a marked influence upon the teeth, which for some inexplicable reason soon become remarkably white.

Whether the climate itself develops these exquisite charms, is of course not positively known, but the atmosphere gets the credit, and no one seems able to rob it of its distinction.

Amusements of every kind have been unusually active during the past week, coaching parties, dances and musicales have been the first on the list, and they have been patronized as such affairs are when everybody is in quest of pleasure. On Monday night the Rutger's College Glee Club Sang at the Shoreham. Tuesday evening there was a grand concert at the same popular house. Wednesday a hop at Carlton Hall and the Shoreham, every opportunity to the crowds here to enjoy themselves, and the ball rooms of both houses were filled with merry dancers from the beginning to the end of the programme. Thursday, Friday and Saturday evenings were conspicuous for musicales, dances and germans, which were largely attended. Thus it will be seen that there is no end of evening amusement.

Bathing takes up a portion of one's time in the morning, after which comes dinner, lounging, driving, tennis and a thousand and one other things calculated to make summer life flow along pleasantly in this pretty village by the sea.

A characteristic of the Point is the absence of "style" such as is known at the larger resorts. If my lady chooses to wear but two gowns a day Mrs. Critique does not raise her hands in anguish, and attempt to flee from her society. Upon the contrary, laxity of rigid social rules, as regards excessive over-dressing, are scrupulously avoided. Everybody who patronizes the Point does as he or she pleases, and on that account the visitors find time to get acquainted and make friends. Do not imagine that ladies are poorly dressed, for they are not. They do not spend all their hours before their mirror, worrying themselves sick over the fit of this gown or that, but clad themselves in becoming raiments and go about their business of pleasure seeking in a a way that exhibits not only good sense but excellent breeding.

More people bathe this season than ever before in the history of the retreat. Old and young take their daily plunges in the breakers and romp and play together like one great family. The thrilling bathing accident of last week was greatly exagerated, and the correspondents who drew so largely on their imagination for a sensational story, have been profoundly censured. There is no safer bathing ground upon the entire coast. The best proof of this strong statement is the fact that since the Point's establishment as a summer resort, no bather has lost his or her life in the ocean here. There is no watering place anywhere that can begin to show so remarkable a record. There is little or no undertow, and the proximity of the bay makes a sea bath here an entirely different and a more enjoyable affair than a similar event where the tide and wave move without restraint.

Among the most conspicuous callers at the Presidential cottage during the week, were Mrs. General Sewell. Col. B. K. Jamison and Mrs. Jamison and Rev. A. A. Murphy, who presides over the little Memorial Chapel, Postmaster General Wanamaker's family, who reside upon the same avenue, a half mile away, are frequent visitors to the White House cottage, also. Informal teas and luncheons have been indulged in quite freely recently, and Mrs. Harrison appears to be disposed to give the people an opportunity to see her oftener, as she has appeared in public several times during the past fortnight, last Friday evening, she, in company with Mrs. Russell Harrison and Mrs. Dimmick, attended a concert at Congress Hall, Cape May, and enjoyed the superb singing of the talented Alida Varena. The entertainment was quite select and many very elegant toilettes were displayed with their usual accompaniments of diamonds, pearls and other precious stones.

NEPTUNE.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease, and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and therefore reqaires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F J Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in dose from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address.

Two Opinions.

Following is the way the Philadelphia Press views the situation:

P. Gray Meek, who wants the Democratic Senatorial nomination in the Clearfield, Centre, and Clinton District, has had bad luck in his own county. While carrying it for himself he has lost the Congressional conferrees, which he expected to put in his pocket to dicker with Clearfield on. The Senatorial nomination is most likely to go to Clinton this year. It is twelve years since that county had the Senator. Clearfield having been honored twelve years, and Centre four. The contest in Clinton is between T. C. Hipple and C. S. McCormick, with the probabilities favoring the former.

Colonel Jack Spangler, who is the choice of the Centre county Democrats for the Congressional nomination in the twenty-eighth District, probably has no expectation of being successful this time, but he is a solid and handsome candidate around whom the unterrified of that section will be sure to rally in the early feature. The nomination this year will be conceded to Congressmen Kurr, who is now serving as chairman of the Democratic State Committee. He will have opposition in one or two of the counties, however.

AN EIDER DUCK FARM.

The colonies of breeding eiders often consist of an immense number of birds and the nests lie so thickly together that it is often difficult to avoid stepping into them. They are usually placed at some slight elevation; and here in any faint depression the duck collects a small quantity of seaweed and drift stuff which she forms into a felty mass with her breast. Upon this four or five eggs are laid in the course of a week, these being of a pale green color, and rather resembling those of the heron. Even before the last egg is laid is seen that a few feathers are scattered about the nest, and as incubation proceeds these increase in quantity. The bird covers the eggs with down plucked from her breast, and this she does day by day until a very considerable quantity buries the eggs. It is this down which has become such an important article of commerce. If the eiders are hatching under ordinary conditions, the young appear in about twenty-six days and almost immediately betake themselves to the water. It is here that they sun themselves, feed and sleep. On a rock-bound bit of coast it is interesting to watch the ducklings paddling among the stones and feeding upon the tiny bivalves that are common among the bays and inlets. These remarks refer to the breeding of wild eiders; but unfortunately, colonies of birds under natural conditions are becoming more and more rare every year. The commercial collector has everywhere stepped in, and is putting a terrible drain upon the species.

In Norway this bird is protected by law, though only to be persecuted the more persistently by private individuals. On one island, that of Isaijardarjup, eider ducks are said to nest in thousands. Speaking of the breeding sights by the shore, Mr. Shepherd, who visited the colony, tells us that the brown ducks sat upon their nests in masses, and at every step started from beneath his feet. On this island of three quarters of a mile in length, it was difficult to walk without stepping into their nests. A thick stone breakwater ran along its coast just above high-water mark. At the bottom and sides of the wall alternate stones had been left out, so as to form a series of compartments for the ducks to nest in. Every compartment was tenanted, and as the visitors walked along the ducks flew out all along the line. These were welcomed by the white drakes, which were tossing on the water, "with loud and clamorous cooing." A farm house on the island was tenanted in like manner. The house itself was "a great marvel." Ducks were hatching on the turf walls which surrounded it, in the window embrasures, on the ground, on the roof. The house was fringed with ducks, and a duck sat in the scraper. Then a grassy bank close by was cut into squares, every one of which was occupied. A windmill was packed, as was every available object on the island mounds, rocks, crevices. This was an eider-down farm. So tame were the ducks as to allow the farmer's wife to stroke them as they sat on their nests.

Of course, there is another side to this pleasant picture, as we see when we learn how the "good lady" of the island repays the confidence of the birds. And here it is by another observer; "The eider down is easily collected, as the birds are quite tame. The female having laid five or six pale, greenish-olive eggs, in a nest thickly lined with her beautiful down, the collectors, after carefully removing the bird, rob the nest of its contents, after which they replace her. She then begins to lay afresh—though this time only three or four eggs—and again has recourse to the down on her body. But her greedy persecutors once more rifle her nest, and oblige her to line it for the third time. Now, however, her own stock of down is exhausted, and with a plaintive voice she calls her mate to her assistance, who willingly plucks the soft feathers from his breast to supply the deficiency. If the cruel robbery be again repeated, which in former times was frequently the case, the poor eider duck abandons the spot never to return and seeks for a new home where she may indulge her maternal instinct undisturbed by the avarice of man.

Pianos - Organs.

The improved method of fastening strings of Pianos, invented by us, is one of the most important improvements ever made, making the instrument more richly musical in tone, more durable, and less liable to get out of tune.

Both the Mason & Hamlin Organs and Pianos excel chiefly in that which is the chief excellence in any musical instrument, quality of tone. Other things though important, are much less so than this. An instrument with unmusical tones cannot be good. Illustrated catalogues of new styles, introduced this season, sent free.

THE PROHIBITION CONVENTION.

Met in the Arbitration Room on Thursday—Full Proceedings are as Follows:

The Centre County Prohibition Convention, called by County Chairman F. Potts Green for the purpose of appointing delegates to the State Convention to meet in Harrisburg on the 20th inst., and place in nomination a county ticket, met in the Arbitration Room, in the Court House at 11 a m August 14, A. D., 1890.

Rev. W L Hayden was appointed temporary chairman and Rev. Geo W Emenheiser temporary secretary.

Rev. W W Cadle, of Snow Shoe, led in prayer, after which the county chairman submitted his report to the convention. It was placed in the hands of an auditing committee appointed by the chair. Being examined it was accepted by vote.

The following persons were appointed as a committee on resolutions, viz: F P Green, W W Cadle, Edward Cain, H P Sankey and Z W Packer.

On motion it was decided that the report of the committee on resolutions, constituted the first item of business, followed by the appointing of delegates to the State Convention, etc., etc., in the afternoon session.

On motion the following committee on finances for the campaign was also appointed, viz: A J Cook, H H Harshberger, Walter Gray, H P Sankey and C H Else, who immediately set themselves to work and throughout the two sessions solicited pledges to the amount of $68. F P Green read a circular from the State Chairman setting forth the importance of a full attendance at the coming State Convention, and Mr. Hayden presented the proposition of the editor of "The People" to furnish six campaign copies for 10 cents—and obtained subscriptions for 100 copies before the close of the afternoon session adjourned.

Convention reassembled soon after 1 o'clock p. m. and the report of the committee on resolutions was submitted and adopted as read.

RESOLUTIONS ADOPTED.

Your committee would respectfully offer the following as their report, viz:

WHEREAS, Civil government is ordained of God "for the punishment of evil-doers and for the praise of them that do well;" and the fundamental principle of good government is protection for the right and prohibition for the wrong; and

WHEREAS, The recent report of the Committee of Congress on the Alcoholic Liquor Traffic read by Hon. J. D. Taylor confirms the indictment of the liquor traffic and declares that it "causes four-fifths of the crimes committed, wastes one-half of the taxation, causes the expenditure of $900,000,000 a year in drink, incapacitates mentally and physically 500,000 people for labor and business, and causes three-fourths of the pauperism of the country and is responsible for the fearful increase of insanity and imbecility and does no good to anybody;" therefore,

Resolved—1st. That the Prohibition party should favor all judicious legislation to protect the homes, the sacred rights and the industrial interests of the, whole people and should persistently oppose drinking saloons as the enemy of all righteousness, of the divine institutions of family, church and state; unnecessary taxation as oppressive to the laboring classes; combines or trusts as enriching the few and impoverishing the masses; and all election frauds, whether by bribery, intimidation, trickery dishonest returns or in any other way, as corrupting the fountain head and hence all the currents of political life and power, and thus sapping the foundations of representative government.

Resolved—2nd. That it is the paramount duty of good government in the State and Nation to prohibit the drink traffic in all its forms as the giant crime of crimes against society, by the most stringent legislation sanctioned by the most effective penalties.

Resolved—3rd. That the prohibitionists of Centre county call upon all good citizens, and especially professing christians, to rid themselves of all responsibility for the drink curse by ceasing to sustain parties that either silently acquiesces in this monstrous crime, or openly declare in favor of continuing the iniqitous business under a license system.

Resolved—4th. That the most energetic and persevering effort should be made to so increase the prohibition vote this fall that it will be a trumpet blast of coming doom to the old rum-ruled political parties in the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania.

F. P. GREEN,
H. P. SANKEY,
W. W. CADLE,
E. E. CAIN,
J. W. PACKER,
Committee.

The names of eleven nominees as candidates for delegates were then presented and balloted for and the eight (that being the required number) who received the highest number of votes were as follows, viz; W L Hayden, H P Sankey D M Lieb, Walter Gray, J Zeigler, Chas. E Murray, Wm. J Dale and W T Bair.

Names of candidates for the various county offices were next placed in nomination by acclamation, viz:

For assembly—D. M. Lieb, Isaac Guss.
For Sheriff—Jas. A Zimmerman.

Precautions Against Cholera Infantum.

Cholera Infantum (Summer Complaint) is the Herod of large American cities in this latitude during the summer season. In the city of Philadelphia it causes about one twentieth of all the deaths for the entire year, and one-sixth of all the deaths of infants under two years of age; and this wholesale destruction of infant life takes place in the short space of two months. Continued high temperature, night and day appears to be its essential cause. It is important, therefore, First: To peep the child cool, and, secondly, to keep its food (milk) cool, (Infants at the breast are much less liable to be attacked than those brought up by hand. Therefore, nurse the baby through the second summer, if possible.) To accomplish the first object, allow the baby to drink freely o cool (not excessively cold) water; bathe it frequently in cool or luke-warm water, two or three times a day if the thermometer is above 90°; keep it in the open air in the shade; take it into the country or out on the water as often as possible. Let it wear a very thin flannel under-shirt, or if not this, a flannel belly-band.

To accomplish the second, get your milk from a dairy where it is kept on ice, keep as little on hand as possible—and keep it on ice if possible. As soon as you get it, boil it for a few minutes and then add a tablespoonful of lime water to every pint. If the child is seized suddenly with diarrhœa, stop its milk at once, and feed it on raw white of egg, gelatine, barley water, and meat or chicken broth; and do not give it milk again until the diarrhœa has stopped. If possible go away with it to the country at once, or, if you live in the country, go to the mountains. Change of air has saved thousands of childrens' lives in this disease. Never try to treat looseness of the bowels in a baby in hot weather yourself, but send at once for a doctor. All the precautions suggested in this circular as to the necessity for cleaning up the house, cellar and yard in expectation of cholera, are equally important as regards cholera infantum.

Knocked Out by the "Bosses."

The Democratic County Convention at Bellefonte yesterday failed to nominate our townsman, George E. Parker, for Sheriff. He was the choice of the majority of the Democrats of the county, and if he had been placed in nomination there are hundreds of Republicans who would have supported him. The "boss" element, however, which seems to control a majority of the politicel conventions in these latter days, was present to a very marked extent and everything cut and dry to knock Philipsburg out. In a square, honest fight, this could not have been done, but by unscrupulous means they succeeded.

The Democrats over here are deeply incensed at the action of the "bosses" in their treatment of Mr. Parker, and on every hand you can hear of those who say they will resent it at the polls. If the Republicans nominate our townsman, Major Jno. A. Wolfe, for Sheriff, there are hundreds of Democrats in Philipsburg and Rush township who will be glad for the opportunity to vote for him and work for his election.—Philipsburg Journal.

—Miss Cronover, of this place, had a recent snake-killing experience which she is not likely to soon forget. She was visiting friends in Brush Valley and in company with other parties went on the mountain to gather huckleberries. While busily engaged she heard a slight noise and was startled to find herself in close proximity with a huge rattlesnake, Help was immediately called and between them his snakeship was dispatched. It measured five feet in length and had twelve rattles.

Held for Court.

Constable Meyers yesterday arrested, Charles Shaffer and Will Barton for taking silverware from a picnic party at Sanderson's Island consisting of the Sanderson family, Judge Furst and other friends. The silver was sold to the Workman family in the Fourth ward from whom it was afterward recovered. Shaffer is a brother of the late Luther Shaffer who was executed for the murder of the Culveys, and Barton is also a youth of bad character. The boys also acknowledge to the stealing of eight chickens from a man named Bowers, two miles beyond Salona, which they also sold to the Workman family and which were found there by constable Meyers. The boys are now in jail.

The boys were given a hearing this afternoon before Alderman Dorey, when it transpired that they went to the Bowers place which is on the Shaffer farm and stole the eight chickens, after which they stole a horse from a man named Bricker and a sulkey from another party and then drove to town and tied their horse on James street and took their chickens to Workman's who they say hired them to steal them. They were heard on both these charges and committed in default of bail. In an interview with constable Keller they acknowledged to having planned to break into a store some time since.

They also had a hearing on the charge of stealing the silverware and in defaul of bail were held for court. Mr Sanderson says he passed them on the road but did not know it was his stuff they were making off with, although he imagined that the basket was familar to him. They sold the basket and contents to Mrs. Workman for 15 cents.—L. H Democrat.

Under New Management.

For several years past rumors have been afloat regarding the intended purchase from Long Bros. of the cave and hotel, and the last few days has developed still another, though as to its foundation we cannot say if correct or not. Mr. George Brandon, of the Brockerhoff House, Bellefonte, it is reported, has been negotiating for the property for some time lately, and at last has secured the consent of the present owners to sell to him, though nothing further has been done in the matter until Mr. Brandon had consulted with the parties whom he represents. The price we believe asked for the cave is $12,000, including the hotel building and several acres of land.

The place is a bonanza for some party of the right stripe and we think Mr Brandon is fully capable of taking charge of it. It will be run on a modern scale and a prominent resort made of it. No finer location could be wished for and under good management will prove a paying investment for the right parties.—Centre Reporter.

A Milk Trust.

The Bellefonte milkmen, or rather the milkmen that sell milk in Bellefonte have organized a trust that is just as much to be condemned as the large trusts about which world-wide fuss is made. They have all agreed to sell no milk to any persons but regular customers without charging one cent per quart more. Even for skimmed milk the same demand is made.

This is all wrong and the milkmen ought not do it. The farmer is the first person to squeal and raise a terrible cry if there is a combination or trust formed that may raise the price on a single piece of farming machinery, and yet he is very willing to enter into a combine to charge the very poor more for the necessity of life than he does the rich.

And this is just what he is doing when he demands of any only regular customers one cent per quart more for their milk. The rich all buy milk regularly—except the few that keep cows. The poor cannot afford to do so and then when they do feel able once, twice or three times per week to buy a pint or a quart of milk—even if it is skimmed milk—then are they compelled to pay one cent per quart more than the rich are asked to pay. Is this right. Most emphatically not. Why don't some farmer—a friend of the poor man and a man who will act fair and honestly by all—buy up a lot of cows and open up a dairy? He could soon establish a large trade and make money. There is money in milk at 8 or even 6 cents per quart. Now let some preacher—farmer come forward and prove his text by diligent practice.

No Fast on Friday.

The restriction imposed upon its members by the Catholic church to abstain from meat on Fridays is an ancient rule of the church, and is designed to impress upon them that the Saviour died on a Friday. They will, however be permitted to eat meat this Friday, as the Pope has granted a dispensation to this effect, because the feast of the Assumption of the Blessed Virgin Mary falls on that day.

To-day was observed as a fast day however, as it is the vigil of the feast. It was owing to the fact that two fast days in one week was not desired that the restriction respecting Friday was suspended. This rule is also suspended when Chirstmas falls on Friday. When the Cathelic Cathedral in New York was consecrated some years ago the faithful of that diocese were granted the privilege of eating meat that day, which was Friday.

—The campmeeting at Penn Cave station is now in full blast. White tents are scattered promiscuously through the woods looking like a small army encamped thereon. The woods is a lovely spot in which to hold a service of that kind and, we doubt not, that the campmeeting now in progress there will be much enjoyed by all and of benefit to many.

—The following from the Tyrone Herald shows how the young men of that place act: "We are acquainted with several selfish young gentlemen who escorted two young ladies to a picnic quite recently, and had a royal time. When an opportunity presented itself they excused themselves, and then bought some watermelon, going into the woods to eat it, where they would not be observed by their friends. Shame on you, young men."

Newton Hamilton.

The Newton Hamilton campmeeting, which began on Tuesday and which is in charge of Presiding Elder M. K. Foster, is more largely attended this year than ever before. There are about 200 more tent holders on the grounds than on any former occasion. The ministers present are Revs. M. K. Foster, B. B Hamlin, George Leidy, J. Cunes, R. F Wilson, George Guyer, A. Miller, A. W. Decker and Morehead. Rev. Foster preached the opening sermon on Tuesday evening.

The equivalent, in English money, of $2,500 was once offered by an old lady in London for the return of a favorite cat which had strayed or been stolen. People called her a "crank," and perhaps she was. It is unfortunate that one of the gentler sex should ever gain this title, yet many do. It is, however, frequently not their fault. Often functional derangements will apparently change a woman's entire nature. Don't blame such sufferers if they are "cranky," but tell them to use Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, which is an infallible remedy for "female weaknesses."

The Republican convention held on Tuesday was one of the largest and most exciting ever held in Bellefonte. It was perfectly harmonious so far as wrangling was concerned. Of course, as at all conventions, the defeated candidate could see just where mistakes had been made but had he been nominated the other fellows could have seen the same mistakes.

It was just 7 minutes of 2 o'clock when county chairman Brown's gavel fell and the call for the convention was read by Secretary John M. Dale. Next followed the reading of the list of delegates and all answered to their names as called. Following is the list of delegates complete:

After the roll call of delegates W. I. Swoope, of Bellefonte, was elected permanent chairman. Mr. Swoope went on the platform and, before proceeding to business, made a very flowery little speech which elicited considerable applause. J M Dale was then elected reading clerk and W H Musser and Capt Bogart Secretaries.

Messrs. J P Sebring, Robert Crosthwaite, Reuben Grim, John Odenkirk and J H Kuhns were appointed a committee on resolutions.

S S Crissman, W S Williams and H E Holtzwerth were appointed a committee on credentials. There being one precinct to inquire into a recess of ten minutes was taken at the end of which time the committee reported the delegates as returned duly elected.

The chairman called for the secretaries to come forward, Capt Bogart came but Mr. Musser didn't. The chair "Mussered" for quite a while but not being able to scare up the bird George B Johnston was elected in his stead.

The nomination for Assembly was next in order and A A Dale, C T Fryeberger and G Guyer Mattern were put in nomination. Mattern and Fryeberger were elected on the first ballot which stood as follows:

Mattern	116
Fryeberger	79
Dale	45

For Sheriff John A Wolfe, H H Montgomery and John G Dubbs were put in nomination. John Wolfe was elected on the first ballot which was as follows:

Wolfe	66
Montgomery	26
Dubbs	28

Edwin Tyson and Riley Pratt were put in nomination for treasurer. Tyson was nominated on the first ballot, it standing as follows:

Tyson	85
Pratt	53

John F. Harter and J F Payne were put in nomination for recorder. Harter won by the following score:

Harter	87
Payne	33

Register was called for but there being no response the nomination of men for county commissioners was next in order. The men put up were as follows; F B Stover, J B Strohm, D B Kuhns, J H Murray, Henry Stevens, D R McClintic, D P Shope, Austin Curtin and John D Decker. It took six ballots to decide the fight and it resulted in the nomination of J B Strohm and D B Kuhns. The voting was as follows:

	1st	2rd	3rd	4th	5th	6th
Strohm	44	43	63
Kuhns	47	52	48	48	54	64
Stover	40	43	44	39	42	47
Stevens	28	38	39	14	14
Curtin	34	28	29	9
Decker	14	8	2
McClintic	13	9	7	2
Shope	11	3
Murray	7	6	7	7

J P Sebring then moved to return to the nomination of a man for register. Carried. George W Fisher, J H Oliger and B F Leitzel were put in nomination. Fisher was nominated on the first ballot with the following majority;

Fisher	62
Oliger	2
Leitzel	16

W B Krape, Samuel T Gray and John M Wagner were put in nomination for Auditors. Gray was elected on the first and Krape on the second ballot.

Benjamin Rich, of Unionville, John P Harris, of Bellefonte, and W P Shoop, of Centre Hall, were elected congressional conferrees.

J H Odenkirk, J A Fiedler and M F Riddle were elected Senatorial conferrees.

John M Dale was then unanimously elected county chairman for the year 1891. The committee on resolutions brought in their report and the following strong resolutions were read and adopted after which the convention adjourned after a session of four hours.

RESOLUTIONS.

Resolved, That the Republicans of Centre County in convention assembled hereby renew their allegiance to the great and glorious principles of the republican party; Protection to the workingman against the competition of the underpaid labor of Europe; Protection to the voter in the South and in the North, by the establishment of an honest ballot and a fair count; Protection to the farmer by an upright administration and by increasing the home-market for his products; Protection to every citizen in the enjoyment of his legal rights.

Resolved, That we endorse the policy of the present National and State administrations, and we heartily congratulate Governor Beaver on the uprightness, intelligence, and patriotism he has shown as the Chief Magistrate of our Commonwealth; That we earnestly desire the adoption of the Australian Secret Ballot System by this Commonwealth, and that we pledge our hearty support to the State and County tickets as nominated by our respective conventions.

NOTES AND COMMENTS.

Philipsburg ought to be satisfied inasmuch as they got the three first men on the ticket. They tried hard to scrape up a man for commissioner but they couldn't find another republican who would accept an office.

It is needless to say that everything went off harmonious and satisfactory and that the ticket is the best that could have been put up, as everybody knows different. But it is a strong ticket, nevertheless, and if every republican does his duty at the next election, will be the winning ticket.

It cannot be said that a Bellefonte ring made the nominations on Tuesday as the ticket was a full choice of the out-of-town delegations—the Bellefonte delegates almost always voting in the minority.

Though some of the candidates for the nomination may feel a little disappointed yet there are none dis gruntled. Mr. Decker, though defeated, is still a republican and will support the entire ticket.

Mr. W I Swoope makes a good presiding officer but he does get proper names slightly mixed up.

The resolutions passed were adopted with applause. The clause calling for a fair ballot was well received.

Mr. John M Dale will run an aggressive campaign, as he is young, smart and full of enthusiasm.

—The funeral of William Smoyer, one of the oldest citizens on Wallaces' Run, Boggs township, took place on Monday August 18th, '90, from his late residence. His death ensued from a gradual breaking down of his physical organism, and as a consequence his demise was lingering in its nature. He bore all with christian fortitude, was identified with Messiahs church for many years, was regular in attendance upon the means of grace when practicable and consistent in his walk among men. His memory will be cherished by all who knew him while their sympathies are heartily accorded to his aged and bereaved widow and his family consisting of three sons and seven daughters. He died in his 74th year. His pastor for the last 19 years, Rev. J. Zeigler conducted the funeral services with due solemnity. He rests in peace.

—In Altoona no liquors, cigars, ice cream or soda water is allowed to be sold on Sunday. In Philadelphia the newsboys go gagged so that they cannot cry out the name of the papers they sell and even the street car bell is muffled. In Bellefonte people can do as they please.

SUNDAY IN CAMP.

There was a Large Attendance at the Different Services.

NEWTON HAMILTON, Pa., August 17.—The gloom that overshadowed the camp on the early morning of Sunday, occasioned by a dense fog, was driven away by the brightness of the sun's rays, and when the hour for the first service arrived, 8.30 o'clock, everybody was in good spirits and a large congregation assembled to hear the word as proclaimed by Rev. G D Penepacker, of Clearfield. The text was taken from Exodus iv:2: "What is that in thine hand? And he said a rod." The difficulties in the way of the deliverance of the children of Israel were briefly referred to when the preacher stated that the text and its surroundings teach us that when God has some special mission to be performed He takes the simplest means to accomplish His purposes. If a man's life be a failure, it will be because he separates himself from God. Only by connecting this life with life eternal can we get the meaning out of life.

The great principle that God's methods have ever been to produce great results from small and inconsiderable means was set forth emphatically. The commonest rod in the commonest hand held up to God will become mighty under His blessing. In our life, before we can accomplish anything for God, we must first stand before God. God has a plan, a purpose in every creation, and if the life of a man is a failure, it is because he has thwarted the purposes of God The man who has not put himself under the tuition of God knows nothing of the symmetry of life.

The sermon closed with an eloquent reference to the great possibilities with which the life is freighted, and the prospects before all who make a right use of their privileges.

After an interval of half an hour the tabernacle was thronged with a multitude to listen to Rev. Henry M. Harman, D D., of Carlisle. He selected as his text John v 4; "And this is the victory that overcometh the world, even our faith." Ever since the morning that man was placed in the Garden of Eden a mighty conflict has been going on in the world. It is being waged to-day in every breast. The conflict in heaven is ended. There they are all together bad: This world is the scene of conflict. It is waged between the good and bad, the right and the wrong.

The sermon was practical, philosophical, ecclesiastical and spiritual.

AFTERNOON SERVICES.

When the hour for childern's services arrived every available seat in the large tabernacle was taken and the wings to the right and left were filled with a multitude, all interested in these delightful exercises. The singing was inspiring and the address of the Rev. William H. Stevens well timed.

The preaching service at 3 o'clock was in charge of Rev. William Swindells, D. D., of Philadelphia. A very large and attentive audience greeted the preacher as he discoursed from Luke xix 7: "He is gone to be guest with a man that is a sinner."

At the young people's meeting at 6 o'clock Rev. W. F. Biddel made an address on Confessing Christ.

The closing services of the day were conducted by Rev. J. A. Wood. jr., of Lock Haven.

A Town Burned Out.

A telegram from Erie says that the town of Austin, in Potter county, was visited by a terribly destructive fire Thursday morning. Before it could be gotten under control every business house, including the hotels, together with many dwellings, were laid in ashes. The lumber manufacturers are heavy losers. Many people are rendered homeless and are compelled to camp out. The loss will be over $300,000, and the insurance will not reach over $100,000. Austin is a town of 4,800 inhabitants, located in the southwestern part of Potter county, in a region that is extensively devoted to lumbering interests. The town contained six hotels and about twenty-five business houses.

Another special dated Buffalo, N Y says: A special dispatch from Austin, a town in Potter county, Pa., which in 1880 had a population of 1,600, states that forty-two business establishments and a large number of dwelling houses have been burned to ashes, and that hundreds of people are now homeless. The fire started on Main street late Wednesday night and burned with great fierceness until 4 o'clock Thursday morning, wiping out the business portion of the town, including the Buffalo Hardware Company's establishment and the Ellsworth House. The mills, lumber piles, and railroad property were saved. Estimates place the loss at $500,000. The town will be rebuilt.

—In the rear of the residence of Mr. John Lane, on Linn street, is a huge rockery holding in its embrace what seems to be a diminuative lake but which, in reality, is a large tub filled with water and hidden by creeping vines. In the tub grows (as if in its native clime) a magnificent pond lily—a plant very rarely seen west of the New England States but which grows there in wonderful profusion. Mrs. Lane planted the bulb only this spring and, with pleasurable interest, she has watched the development of the plant as the angled stems crept upward and the large pads gradually unfurled themselves to float gracefully upon the water. But the climax was not reached until the first bud appeared upon the surface which, at first, seemed like an oblong green ball which grew and grew until, as if by magic, the bulb was opened and the flower was in full bloom—a large rosette of waxy whiteness in the centre of which was a long taft of bright yellow stamens, and exhaling a deligotful perfume. Resting, as it does, among the broad pads of varying green the lilly is a pretty sight and must be seen to be appreciated.

Council's Doings.

Monday evening being the regular meeting night of borough council five members assembled at the council chamber. After the preliminary business was attended to Mr. Bradley, of North Spring street, requested council to put in order that part of the street near where he resides. Referred to street committee for investigation.

The W. C. T. U. presented a petition asking council to paint the fountain in the diamond a bronze, also to clear up the streets and pavements. The water committee was instructed to paint the fountain and the street committee to give the latter request their attention.

Thirteen property owners on East High street requested an extension of the water out that thoroughfare from the jail. Referred to water committee for investigation and report.

Street committee handed in a report on the sewer along Burroughs Alley and down Spring street to Lamb. The probable cost of construction of a stone sewer would be about fifteen hundred dollars. Referred back to street committee to investigate and report on the cost of a terra cotta sewer and the difference between the two.

Water committee reported two leaks in the big spring. Referred to said committee to have the necessary repairs made.

Requests have been made to council for the opening of a street from Bishop to Curtin at the eastern limits of the borough, and the borough solicitor, Clement Dale, Esq., was asked to render an opinion as to the legal way of doing so. Mr. Dale said it could only be opened by an ordinance of the town council and that all streets heretofore opened by order of court—unless they had now been in use twenty-one years—were illegally opened. This would especially apply to East High street which was opened that way only a few years ago. Council instructed the solicitor to make application to the court on next Monday to have that order annulled. Then the borough engineer will be put to work to lay out a street from Bishop to Curtin and all the streets running east and west be opened up to the said cross street. when appraisers will be appointed to assess the damages and the whole will then be legally opened up by an ordinance passed by the council. This completed the business of the evening. Adjourned.
